How easily we become suspicious of those who are different from us, particularly people of other religions. He or she is a Muslim or a Jew or a Protestant—or a foreigner. For some, perhaps many, this is enough to discredit that person or the good he or she does. Here comes Jesus, whose heart beats for all people, and he tells us to be open-minded and to recognise all the good there is in people and their deeds, whoever they are. The same Spirit is working in us who works in all who do good. We ask the Lord to open our minds today.
